Derby Porcelain Society To Stage Major Exhibition at Antiques for Everyone

National Exhibition Centre, Birmingham B40 INT
Halls 17-18
23rd - 26th November 2017

The Derby Porcelain Society will be staging a major exhibition at the Winter edition of Antiques for Everyone at the NEC, 23rd - 26th November. Antiques for Everyone is an important and busy fair featuring fabulous antiques and works of art for sale belonging to more than 200 specialist dealers.

Titled 'Derby Porcelain – Artistry from the 18th Century to the Present Day', the exhibition will feature examples from the production of all three Derby porcelain factories from c1750 to the present day and will include many rare and previously unrecorded pieces. Almost every piece will have come from private collections.

'Derby' is a world-renowned porcelain that was first manufactured in the mid-eighteenth century and which continues in production to the present day. Examples from the production of all three Derby porcelain factories from circa 1750 to the present day will feature in the display. In addition, the Society is preparing a full colour catalogue of the exhibits that will provide in-depth information of all the pieces on display and is sure to become a very useful reference work for the future.

Representing the Derby Porcelain Society, council member John Astle said: 'This is a great opportunity for the Society to promote Derby porcelain. Our intention to show many lesser known, unrecorded and newly discovered pieces is sure to generate lots of interest amongst collectors and enthusiasts. The fair is well-known among ceramics collectors and always very busy. I'm really looking forward to it!'

Commenting, Fair Director Mary Claire Boyd said: “After a very successful summer fair in July and a great Feature Exhibition, we’re delighted to be welcoming the Derby Porcelain Society to the winter fair with such a major display of rare and important pieces from private collections. Their presence emphasises how AFE is such an important event for ceramics collectors. We have many specialists exhibiting and plenty of Derby pieces on sale. Of course, our November fair will provide huge inspiration for collectors in so many areas, and is also a great opportunity for Christmas present buying.”

Antiques for Everyone

With tens of thousands of exhibits on sale and fresh stock arriving every day, this is a major event for collectors, interior designers, home furnishers and international connoisseurs. Prices range from £10 to £100,000 and buyers make the purchases knowing that exhibits have been vetted for quality and authenticity. The winter fair is also a great hunting ground for Christmas presents, from fine jewellery to silver tableware, porcelain, glass, fine art and much more.

The fair has many additional attractions:

Celebrity Talks held daily:

Judith Miller

Judith Miller began collecting in the 1960s while a student at Edinburgh University. She has since become one of the world’s leading experts in antiques & collecting and known worldwide for the Millers Guide books. She is a regular specialist on TV, notably on BBC’s Antiques Roadshow.

Will Farmer

Will’s passion for antiques began at the age of 4 months old when he went to his first auction. By the age of 12, he had his own stall at a local fair. Today he is a dealer, writer and BBC Antiques Roadshow expert in Ceramics, Glass and Decorative Arts.

Vetted & Datelined for Quality and Assurance
